Washington, July 21.—The senate held an exciting session yesterday. No business was transacted, but the debate on the tariff bill and the disagreement of the conference was the liveliest the senate had experienced for many a ath. The principal speeches of the were those of Senators Hill and Vest (democrats). The former defended the president are the position assumed by the executive in his late letter to Chairman Wilson, and Mr. Vest severely criticised the president and defended the senate bill. Mr. Smith (N. J.) defended the senate bill. Mr. Palmer (III.) favored the senate bill sause it was the best that could be obtained under the circumstances, but he would modify it. Mr. Blanchard (La.) thought there had been bad faith somewhere. At the close of the debate the senate adjourned until Monday.

The house disposed of a number of bills. Most of the day, however, was tion introduced by Mr. Tucker (Va.) to amend the constitution by taking away from congress authority over the election of the United States senators and empowering the states to prescribe the ies, places and manner of holding elections for senators. No vote was reached and the evening session was devoted to pensions.

BATURDAY WARRINGTON, July 23.-The senate was not in session on Saturday.

Washington, July 24. - In the senate yesterday the proceedings were highly interesting although resulting in the setion of no business. The chamber and galleries were packed to hear the speeches on the tariff bill conference. Mr. Gorman (Md.) was the lend-ing speaker and for nearly three hours severely denounced the president's action on the tariff bill and gave the reasons why the senate had amended and finally agreed to the house bill, and he urged the senute to adhere to the measure as passed. He was listened to with intense interest. Mr. White (Cal.) followed. About 3 o'clock, before voting on the motion of Mr. Hill to recede from the coal and iron amendment, the senate went into executive of the Most Interesting Groups of Islands in the Portio. There are, perhaps, among the many groups of Islands that stud the expanse of the broad Pagino like glorious emerlds, clusters some that are more beautiful than the Marquesas, but it is safe to say there are none that are more interesting. While engaged in whaling, as a young man, I visited the Marquesas islands a number of times, and always with increasing interest. This group was discovered about two hundred years ago by a Spanish navigator named Mandana, and the islands are sometimes named after him.

The Marquesas group, being of vol-canic origin, are distinguished by lofty mountain peaks that look from a distance like the rema'ns of titanic ruins. Being situated near the equator the climate is warm and the vegetation is peculiarly luxuriant. The natives of these islands are splendid specimens of humanity, the men being remarkable for their fine forms, great stature and marveious strongth. I remember see-ing a chief measured who stood six feet eight inches in height, and he was straight as a lance and as perfectly proportioned as a Greek statue, and when we wondered at his size he laughed and told us that he had a brother who was much taller than him

Owing to the climate, the only dress of the Marquesans is a strip of bark cloth about the waist, but they make up for the want of raiment by the most elaborate system of tattooing I have ever seen. They tattoo every part of the body, even to the palms of their hands, the toes of the feet and the shaven parts of their heads. tattooing is of the most elaborate The intricate patterns, however, are seen only on mon, the women tooed on the arm, or a few blue rings on the fingers. The men who do the tattooing are artists in their way, and are supported in royal style at the ex-they prick their curious patterns While the men are so tall and handsome, curlously enough the women are comparatively short of stature, being stumpy and awkward in their figures. not particularly good looking. Like all savage children, those of the Marquesas islands are slender, graceful and remerkably pretty. From childhood up to old age they delight in arranging their hair in the most fautustle fashion. Sometimes the whole crown is shaven except two tufts, one on each side of the head, which resembles horns. Again, the hair is dressed in little bunches, the spaces between them being shaven, each bench being crowned by bright sen shell or a flower.

Hut it is not only in their dress and appearance that the Marquesans are peculiar. Their houses are entirely different from those of the other is landers. They are usually built of stone, and some of them are two stories in height, access to the upper floors being had by means of Indders, which are sed from the outside, entrance being KANSAN CITY. July 24.—The receipts of sheat were large to-day and a good deal was sought in the country to arrive. Prices were windows. As in all warm countries, about He lower. The demand was active and fires for cooking are built away from made through the openings made for windows. As in all warm countries, the houses, usually under a tree and without any protecting roof. Like the Samonns and Fijians, these people sleep on mats, in the manufacture of which they show great skill.

The Marquesans are very fond o children, and every time a child is born to one of their chiefs they build for it a pretty little house and adorn It with toys suitable to the sex.

The people live in villages, for the every cluster of houses there is a ways to be found a woofed-in ampitheater in which they hold their dances at the full of every mean. These dances are largely social, but they still have a religious significance though the people claim to be Chris

The Marquesans manage their cances with great skill and, of course, are excellent swimmers. The shores of their slands are resorted to by great num ters of monstrous sharks; but instead of being intimidated, the dusky swim mere do not hesitate to leap into the water and dive down to attack the sharks with their knives. The fact that very few of them are ever killed in this dangerous work shows how skill-ful and brave they are.

Excepting the chiefs, who are per mitted to have as many wives as they choose, the Marquesans do not practice polygamy. One reason, I think why the women are not physically so fine as the men is the fact that all the work devolves on them. They are virtually the hewers of wood and the drawers of water, and they do all the agricultural work of the Islands, which is very considerable, as the prin-

While naturally quick-tempered and inclined to be domineering, the Marquesan islanders are fond of children and particularly of their own. Mis-alonaries, some of them sent out by American societies, have establishe schools all over the islands, and the blidren being very bright and fond of study, I am told that they excel white children of the same age.
